Containing the freſheſt Advices Foreign and Domeſtick.

FROM DECEMBER 6. TO DECEMBER 14. 1738.

PETERSBURGH, Auguſt 30.

TWO Days ago Mr. Pauloff, Adjutant to the Veldt Marſhal Count Munich, arrived here with an Account of a Fourth Action on the 6th Inſtant, within a ſmall Diſtance of the Nieſter, between the Ruſſian Army, and the Troops commanded by the Sultan of Bialogrod. The Account of that Action is as follows.

The 5th of Auguſt a Council of War was held, wherein a Reſolution was taken to march the Troops between the two little Rivers Molokiſch and Brelocz, as far as the Place where they fall into the Nieſter, over-againſt the Ottoman Army, to draw ſo near the Banks of that River, as to be able to reconnoitre the Forts and Batteries raiſed by the latter on the other ſide of it, in order to make the neceſſary Diſpoſitions for forcing the Paſſage, and driving away the Turkiſh Army from before Bender. Conformable to that Reſolution, the Equipages filed off towards Midnight, and the next Day very early in the Morning, the Army began its March.

The Infidels have two powerful Armies in this Neighbourhood: That of the Turks, which is the greateſt, lies on the other Side of the Nieſter, where they have intrenched themſelves. The other, commanded by the Sultan of Bialogorod, encamps near the Mouth of the River Molokiſch, and conſiſts of all the Tartars, with ſome Thouſands of Turks.

As ſoon as our March was perceived by the latter, they decamped at ſeven o'Clock in the Morning, croſſed the Molokiſch, and poſted themſelves on a Riſing Ground, which reached 10 or 12 Werſts all along our Left from the Van Guard to the Rear Guard. We judged by the Diſpoſitions of the Infidels, that they intended to attack us; upon which we halted, in order to draw together the ſeveral Diviſions of the Army, and take the neceſſary Meaſures for covering the Proviſions and the Baggage.

Towards Ten o'Clock the Enemy march'd up, and attacked the Rear Guard, while another Body of their Troops croſs'd a Valley, in order to fall upon our Van Guards, but the latter having been quickly repulſed by the Calmucks, Coſſacks and Huſſars, we perceived that the Infidels poſted on the Heights, were coming down upon our Rear Guard, which obliged the Veldt Marſhal Count Munich to haſten thither. The Attack was very ſmart on that Side: The Don Coſſacks ſuſtained all the Fury of the Enemy, but made ſo brave a Defence that after diſcharging their Fire Arms, they fell in upon the Turks with their Pikes, and forced them to retire, tho' they were much ſuperior in Number.

In the mean time Major General Philoſophow, who commanded in the Rear Guard, was obliged to remain at a ſmall Diſtance behind with four Regiments, in order to cover the reſt of the Baggage following the Army. The Enemy attacked theſe four Regiments, but the Major General having been ſpeedily aſſiſted by the Dragoon Grenadiers, the Don Coſſacks, and three Regiments of Foot headed by General Romantzoff, the Infidels were repulſed once more. Several other Regiments were poſted at certain Diſtances from each other, amongſt which the Prince of Woifenbuttle had three under his Command, in order to keep the Enemy at a Bay, and prevent their falling upon the Baggage. During this Action we made a continual Fire with ſeveral Field Pieces upon the Enemy, who we obliged to give way on every Side about Four o'Clock. Then the Rear Guard joined the ſecond Diviſion, and the Troops reſted themſelves until every Thing was got ready in the Camp they were to enter. The Infidels had burnt all the Fields, but as it rained very plentifully for ſeveral Days together before this Engagement, it was of no great Service to them.

Towards Five o'Clock in the Evening, the Infidels, who had retreated by the ſame Way that they came, attempted another Attack againſt the Coſſacks and Calmucks, who were poſted before the firſt and third Diviſion, but had no better Succeſs than the former, and towards Eight they diſappeared entirely; after which the Army entered the Camp, its Right Wing being within Cannon Shot of the Nieſter, and the Enemies Batteries, and the River Bielocz behind it.

Our Loſs in this Engagement is very inconſiderable: Among the Dead we reckon Mr. Woloſchium, Colonel of the Don Coſſacks, and two other Colonels of the ſame Coſſacks. The Enemy's Loſs muſt have been great; for no ſmall Number of them were found on the Field of Battle, eſpecially of the Turks; the Tartars, according cording to their Cuſtom, having carried off their Dead.

Adjutant Pauloff brought alſo a Letter from Count Munich to the Empreſs of Ruſſia, which is dated the next Day after this laſt Action, and runs thus:

As we are at preſent within Cannon Shot of the Ottoman Army, I am making all the neceſſary Diſpoſitions for Canonading and Bombarding the Infidels To-morrow at Break of Day. Therefore I humbly beſeech your Imperial Majeſty to give me leave to refer you to the incloſed ſhort Account of a new Advantage, which, by the Aſſiſtance of the Almighty, we gained over the common Enemy Yeſterday, I have the Honour to felicitate your Imperial Majeſty on this Occaſion with ſo much the more Joy, becauſe the Enemy, whoſe Attack was a moſt furious one, had been reinforced by a greater Number of Turks than in any of the three former Engagements, notwithſtanding which they were baffled and forced to retire with great Loſs. The Infidels are not only ſtrongly intrench'd on the other ſide of the Nieſter, but have alſo raiſed ſeveral Batteries, from which they actually fire upon the Coſſacks and Ruſſians they can perceive: The Janizaries paſs the River in ſmall Detachments, and ſkirmiſh with our Grand Guards; but I am ſure that they will have no great ſtomach for it To-morrow; were it not for the Nieſter's being between the two Armies, we ſhould probably have forced them to a general Battle to our Advantage before now: Perhaps I ſhall ſend the News of one by the next Courier.

Other private Advices from the Ruſſian Army of the ſame Date as the Veldt Marſhal's Letter, inform us, that the Nieſter is but 100 Yards over at the Place where the Ruſſians have taken Poſt in order to paſs it; that that Paſſage appears convenient enough, tho' the Banks are ſomewhat ſteep on the other Side, and that the Infidels are ſtrongly intrench'd; but that in ſpite of all thoſe Difficulties Count Munich would not fail to attempt the Paſſage of that River the next Day (8th of Auguſt, N. S.) for which purpoſe his Excellency was raiſing a Battery of 50 Pieces of heavy Cannon, and ſome Mortars, ſo that we expect every Moment a Courier with the News of the Succeſs of his Enterprize.

We have received no Courier from the Veldt Marſhal Count Munich ſince the 21ſt Inſtant; but nevertheleſs we have received Advice by another Canal, that his Excellency finding the Paſſage of the Nieſter too difficult in the Place where he firſt took Poſt, had decamped in order to ſeek for one more convenient; upon which the Turks, who looked upon that Retreat as a downright Flight, croſſed the Nieſter themſelves, and with great Fury fell upon the Ruſſian Army; but that they were ſharply repulſed, and abſolutely defeated: We wait the Confirmation and Particulars of that Action, by the Courier ſent by the Veldt Marſhal, but we fear he has fallen into the Hands of the Tartars.

Letters from Warſaw, bring Advice, that the Ruſſian Army commanded by Count Munich, has had a fifth Engagement with the Turks on the 7th or 8th Inſtant, and aſſure us that the Ruſſians have paſſed the Nieſter.

BELGRADE, Aug. 24. Some Advices from Brod, ſay, that the Boſniacks had made another Incurſion into Croatia, but after a Skirmiſh with our Men near Coſtanitza, wherein they loſt about 300 Men, they were retired. Our Loſs is ſaid to have amounted to one third of that Number. We have juſt receiv'd Advice that the Turks have ſurprized one of our Detachments at Pallaſch, 4 or 5 Leagues from this City. The ſaid Detachment conſiſted of 1000 Horſe and 300 Foot; of theſe, 500 Troopers, and 150 Foot, were gone out to Forage, while the reſt of the Cavalry were diſmounted. We don't yet certainly know what's become of the latter, nor whether the Foragers, whom, no doubt, the Enemy, endeavour'd to ſurpriſe, found means to eſcape; only we hear that Major General Ciceri was wounded upon this Occaſion. Notwithſtanding what has been ſaid in Excuſe for the precipitant Surrender of Orſova, 'tis very probable that the true Reaſons of it are not yet known. Colonel Cornberg, the Commandant, will be obliged to juſtify himſelf before the Council of War, or before the Commiſſioners who will be appointed to examine him. Captain Stein who commanded in the Fort of St. Elizabeth, only ſurrender'd it in Obedience to the Orders of Colonel Cornberg; but he refus'd, we hear, to ſign the Capitulation. This is at leaſt what they give out here; that is to ſay, in the Neighbourhood of the Army, where People are ſeldom ſo well informed of the Truth of what paſſes, as in Foreign Countries, to which the Officers Letters carry ſuch Intelligence, as they don't think fit to communicate to one another.

VIENNA, Aug. 30. The Prince de Lobkowitz, who commands in Tranſylvania, has informed the Court, that the Diſtempers which rage in that Province are not ſo dangerous as was believed, and that the Air is not at all infected. The Prince, who is poſted with 8000 Men in the Defile of Hazeg, to obſerve the Motions of the Turks on that Side, had deſired a Reinforcement of ſome Thouſand Men.

EDINBURGH, Aug. 24. We have Advices from the North, which give Account that they have lately been infeſted with a Gang of Iriſh Thieves, who, under Pretence of aſking the charitable Aſſiſtance of good People, travelled and committed horrid Villianies: Two of them, ſome Time ago, were detected, and put in Goal, and now the others are ſeparate, occaſioned by the warm Purſuit of the Country; for it ſeems one of them, diſguiſed in a Woman's Habit, had aſked Lodging at a Houſe they deſigned to rob, which, the Night being Stormy, was allow'd; After the Family had gone to Bed, one of the Servants hearing a Noiſe, look'd up, and ſaw the Lodger laying aſide the Diſguiſe, and preparing to open the Door; he had a Couple of Piſtols, which he likewiſe perceived him to load, and lay aſide, and, having unbar'd the Door, made the Sign for his Aſſociates to advance: But the Servant vant laid hold of that Opportunity to ſecure it, and alarm the Family, who immediately ſtood upon their Guard, and diſappointed the Rogues Deſigns.

The Whale lately mentioned to have been caſt in upon the Shore of Eymouth, was immediately ſeized by Sir John Home of Manderſton, as having a ſpecial Right of ſeveral hundred Years ſtanding, to all Wreck within that Bounds. The Speck or Fat filled 56 Hogſheads; and we hear it has been ſince claim'd by the Vice Admiral or his Deputies. There were ſeen at the ſame time ſeveral other Whales at that Place, and continue on the Coaſt.

LONDON, Sept. 18. The following Letter is dated at Paris, Sept. 2. 'The Imperial Ambaſſador has lately made Proof before his Majeſty at Compeign of a Horſe which ran a French League in three Minutes. We hear from Tonquin in China, that four Jeſuits who arrived there in February laſt to preach the Goſpel, were put under Arreſt by Order of the Governor of that Province; and being required to trample the Crucifix under Foot on pain of being put to Death, they choſe to kiſs the Crucifix on their Knees, and were condemned to be Beheaded.
